

Pieces of me

Stephanie Mulvey
Graphic Designer

A resident of Katonah NY, since birth 20/6/1990 Stephanie Mulvey, graphic design student at Aiu Loondon has held a life long affection for the arts. Her own personal growth and development has further enhanced this love, evident during personal moments where inspiration is drawn from all around her, be it her love for her family or fear of squirrels and deer. Her hobbies include socialising with family and friends, knitting and working out.

1 A rosary has always stood for prayers. Now that I am on my own I am not as religious as I was brought up to be. Yet I still remain to have a rosary on my bedpost. I guess I believe it will save me from an intruder like garlic stops a vampire.

2 Since my mother was young it has been a tradition in the family that when you a gift-ing a purse or wallet to someone you must place a shiny penny in it.

3 My glasses look as though they have been through Hell and back, with the right arm broken. While it may be simpler to get a new pair their deformity makes them mine.

4 In grade school a teacher gave each student a Lambs Ear plant to take home, I have always had a love for the plant I will always call "Deer's Ears". Still to this day I grow a smile on my face like the day I first received it.

5 This image is always carried around with me to remind my self the times from when my sister and I were younger. This photo shows my younger sister, Kelsey, and I at Jones Beach, NY. Every summer my family has always made a few trips to the beach, until recently where our lives have all become too busy for a relaxing day in the sun.

6 I use Wales where my boyfriend's family lives as my get away spot, the place I can go when I need a break from the city. The Daffodil is the flower of Wales.

7 Until this year my idea of a beach was what the beaches in the US look like. On a trip to wales with my boyfriend Ross, I got another glance at a different idea to beaches.

8 In the early stages of our relationship my boyfriend learned how much my family means to me. He surprised me one day with a mug, which was decorated with a photo of my family.

9 On a summer trip to the Jersey Shore, a family friend and I bought an Irish Clad-dagh Ring. A few years after our purchase, she passed away. Even though the ring has cracked in the back I remain to keep it in her memory.

10 I believe I am the last person in the world that still relies on their Filofax to stay organized. The familiarity with the routine of adding entries and the ability to cross-completed tasks out provides comfort and satisfaction.

11 An abnormal gift my mother gave to both my sister and me before we left home to go to University. When the phrase is said you're meant to knock on a piece of wood, or your head.

12 Campbell's Tomato and Rice soup it is the only thing from the states I have my mother constantly sending over, boxes if possible.
